THE MUSIC INDUSTRY IS FINALLY EMBRACING ONLINE ACTIVITY
Music Industry Startup Indiy is supporting musicians to transition to the digital world

[World]: [Indiy]

The Music industry is to nearly double in value by the end of the decade, Goldman Sachs says

Analysts at Goldman Sachs said in a research note that live music would be “severely impacted” by the postponement and cancellation of events this year, leading to a 75% drop in revenue but just because the world has gone online, it doesn’t mean your craft has to stop.

Indiy is the online marketplace that has launched where musicians can buy and sell music service.

They put musicians in control of their own music journey, you can see some of the music pros available on www.indiy.com and signup for free, and even list a service!

“Our aim is to empower people to create and make money from their music, anywhere in the world, it is especially important for musicians to refocus their efforts given the current situation with Covid-19 and we are here to support them every step of the way” - Chris Hocking, CEO at Indiy.

To succeed in the music industry is no easy feat, you need to break through the noise, avoid the scams and hurdle over gatekeepers which can be tough because doing it alone is difficult but why not take charge doing it by yourself together with the new online Indiy marketplace...
